Welcome to Burlington — and Vermont

We're delighted to have you! BTV The Burlington International Airport Quarterly is a bilingual magazine — translated into French for our Québecois visitors — that highlights Vermont's recreational, cultural and dining scenes according to the season.

This issue is a celebration of Vermont's short but sweet summer. Lake Champlain comes alive this time of year as the center of water-recreational activity. We'll tell you how to best experience its waters by skimming the surface with a paddle or float or diving deep below the waves to see some historic shipwrecks. From foodie walking tours to baseball games to concerts outdoors and on, we'll present you with some exciting options for what to eat, see and hear in and around Burlington too.

Oh, if you're just passing through Vermont, we hope this issue convinces you to return for a longer stay! Use this magazine, too, as a guide to the airport and on the ground transportation options.

While you're waiting for takeoff, the Burlington International Airport wants to make your stay a pleasant one. Please have a look around and enjoy its amenities and services, including a yoga space, travel-reading rooms, charging stations, free Wi-Fi and local art. Localvore citizens: the Skippy Pankake now has gift locations before and after security to keep you happily fed whatever you're coming or going.

We thank you for flying BTV and hope you'll come back to see us soon. Let the beautiful city of Burlington and state of Vermont amaze you. ✈

Signs of the Season

Summertime brings the seasonal rebirth of Vermont's beloved snack shack, which can be found lakeside as well as deep in the mountains. So like the locals and order a creemee from Burlington Bay Market & Café — "creemee" is Vermont's extra-creamy version of soft-serve ice cream. burlingtonbaycafe.com

L'été est synonyme de nouveauté des très populaires casse-croûtes du Vermont le long du lac et dans les montagnes. Faites comme les habitants du coin et commandez un cornet de "creemee" au Burlington Bay Market & Café — la "creemee" est une crème glacée extra-légère typique du Vermont. burlingtonbaycafe.com

Lake Champlain doesn't have the wind and waves that coastal surfers like for gromets, but it's a hot spot for the flat-water alternative: standup paddleboarding. Leave the shore behind and glide across the serene surface with a rental lesson or tour from Peddleboart Champlain, located at Burlington's Oakledge Park. peddleboartchamplain.com

Le lac Champlain n'offre pas les vents et les vagues dont les surfieurs de l'océan ont l'habitude, mais c'est un plan d'eau idéal pour le plancher à pagaie: un travail de détente en eau calme. Quittez la rive et glissez sur les eaux lasses du lac sur une planche en location dans le cadre d'une leçon ou bien lors d'une excursion proposée par Peddleboart Champlain, qui se trouve au parc Oakledge à Burlington. peddleboartchamplain.com

Les spectacles de soleil sur le lac constituent un magnifique spectacle quotidien, mais rien ne dépasse les feux d'artifice du Jour de l'Indépendance qui ont lieu le 3 juillet par jour à Vermont. Les feux d'artifice, une foule qui se rassemble, des gens musiciens, et une grande fête à lieu au bord du lac. Avec concerts et spectacles en plein air, venez tous à Burlington. enjoyburlington.com

THE LIFE AQUATIC

Setting sail for the Lake Champlain Maritime Museum
Mettez les voiles vers le Musée maritime du lac Champlain

BY KEN PICARD

Summertime visitors to Burlington inevitably turn their eyes to Lake Champlain, its sparkling waters inviting all kinds of aquatic activity and reflecting — in stunning effect — candy-colored sunsets. But these deep-blue waves also hold both history and mystery. Looking to dive into their depths? Head to the Lake Champlain Maritime Museum (lcmuseum.org).

The word “museum” hardly does justice to this hidden gem in Vergennes, less than an hour south of Burlington. From late May to mid-October, it offers dynamic exhibits, classes and activities dedicated to preserving and teaching the history of Lake Champlain and the people and vessels that have plied its waters for centuries.

While at Burlington, VT, or online, lcmuseum.org’s tour of Lake Champlain, with its eazeo avatars, propels to toutes les activités possibles, mêlant chaque soir les vibrantes couleurs du coucher de soleil. Ces flots d’un bleu profond sont également riches en histoire et en mystère. Prêts à plonger? Rendez-vous au Musée maritime du lac Champlain (lcmuseum.org).

Le mot « musée » ne rend pas justice à ce joyau qui se baigne à Vergennes, moins d’une heure au sud de Burlington. De la fin mai à la mi-octobre, profitez des expositions, des cours et d’autres activités passionnantes vouées à la préservation et à l’enseignement de l’histoire du lac Champlain et des personnes et navires qui en sillonnent les eaux depuis des siècles.

ROCKIN' THE BOAT

A motor could spend hours porusing the fascinating nautical-themed installations contained in more than a dozen buildings scattered across the museum grounds. Most pay tribute to the modes of travel that have been used on Lake Champlain, from Abenaki Indian canoes and horse-powered ferries to 19th-century steamboats and a 35-foot ice yacht dubbed the Storm King. Built in 1903, the yacht was the latest form of human transportation in its day, capable of speeds of 120 miles per hour.

"The Key to Liberty: The Revolutionary War in the Champlain Valley" exhibit is a must-see for visitors interested in the American Revolution and the decisive naval battles that were fought on Lake Champlain. The permanent display features eyewitness accounts of the 1776 Battle of Valcour Island, including a nine-foot scale model of the galleon Phaëton that was sunk by the British Royal Navy — and later raised in 1935 and transported to a Smithsonian museum.

The exhibit reflects research that's under way at the museum all year round. On-site archaeologists and researchers are constantly discovering new artifacts to add — such as the cannon that exploded aboard the galleon New York in 1776.

Indeed, Lake Champlain has one of the richest and most unique nautical histories of any body of water in North America. It's home to more than 300 shipwrecks dating back to the French and Indian War of the mid-18th century, and new wrecks are still being discovered. Because the museum is contracted with the State of Vermont to maintain and oversee those underwater cultural resources, it opens its conservation lab to visitors, allow-

BIENVENUE À BORO!

Le musée regroupe plus d'une dizaine d'installations, qui recréent de fascinantes installations rétroques, dont le plus grand éblouit les regards de transport utilisés sur le lac Champlain au fil du temps. Parmi elles, le fameux « bateau » de l'époque, le bateau à vapeur du 19^e siècle et un voilier de plus de 10 mètres nommé Storm King. Ce dernier, construit en 1862, pouvait atteindre une vitesse de près de 200 km/h, heure où le moyen de transport humain le plus rapide de l'époque.

Les visiteurs intéressés par la Révolution américaine et les batailles navales difficiles lentes sur le lac Champlain ne doivent surtout pas rater l'exposition permanente The Key to Liberty: The Revolutionary War in the Champlain Valley. Vous pourrez consulter des reconstitutions de la bataille de 1776 à l'île Valcour et admirer un modèle réduit de 2,75 m de la chaloupe canonnière Phœnix coulé par la Marine royale britannique et ramené à la surface en 1835, puis transporté à un musée Smithsonian.

Cette exposition illustre bien le travail de recherche du musée. Sur place, des archéologues et des chercheurs découvrent constamment de nouveaux artefacts, comme un canon qui a explosé à bord de la chaloupe canonnière New York en 1776.

Le lac Champlain a une histoire navale parmi les plus riches et uniques en Amérique du Nord. On y découvre plus de 300 années remontant à l'Antiquité de la Canope, au 19^e siècle – un chiffre qui augmente au rythme des nouvelles découvertes. Comme le musée a conclu avec l'État du Vermont une entente visant la préservation et la supervision de ces ressources culturelles uniques, son laboratoire de conservation est ouvert au public, qui peut observer les méthodes de restauration et de préservation.

Deux importantes expositions sur les voiliers du 19^e siècle ont lieu et de l'U.S. Marine est aussi la construction de la goélette Lois McClure. Contrairement à l'origine pour rester ancrée au port de Burlington, le Lois McClure était censé être un outil de protection du musée si elle était en panne. Elle a été construite des excursions jusqu'à Long Island (New York) et à Québec. Le vendredi 4 juillet, la goélette embarquera un voyage de deux mois vers Buffalo (New York) pour les célébrations du bicentenaire de la construction du canal Erie.

Two recent exhibits that are prominently featured, the General Butler and C.J. Walker, later become the inspiration for building a replica schooner, the Lois McClure. Originally intended as a permanently moored exhibit on Burlington's waterfront, the Lois McClure was such a successful outreach tool for the museum that it now takes regular excursions as far as Long Island, NY, and Quebec City. On July 4th weekend, the schooner began a two-month journey to Buffalo, NY, to mark the bicentennial of the Erie Canal construction.

ALL HANDS ON DECK

Central to the museum's mission is keeping alive traditional nautical skills. Through workshops, classes and trips on the water. About twice a month, the museum operates a 50-passenger vessel called the Etowah. Visitors can climb aboard and — without ever donning a scuba suit — explore wrecks along the lake bottom via a live video feed from a remotely operated underwater vehicle. Says museum co-director Joyce Ciesion, “We see it really clearly on a dry screen, all with a scuba in hand.”

Throughout the summer, visitors can also choose from a 4 to 6-part menu of classes. These include daily demonstrations and instruction in traditional glassblowing — once used for making nautical lights, lighthouse lenses, deck lights and piers.

The museum is also home to one of New England's largest blacksmith shops. About 10 years ago, while building the replica of the galleon Philadelphia, the museum built an 18th-century-style forge. That exhibit proved so popular that, in 2008, a new forge was opened for teaching blacksmithing, metalworking and bronze casting.

Visitors can also check out one of the museum's fleet of 18 rowing gigs, which are available daily for hour-long self-guided trips on the lake, weather permitting. (Register in advance to complete the necessary training and safety clinic.)

Sound like too much to experience in just one day? Museum co-director Nick Tichonuk remembers walking the grounds last summer when he asked a visitor what he thought of the place.

“He said, ‘This place!’ So I asked him what’s wrong,” Tichonuk recalled. “He said, ‘I read somewhere that I should allow two hours at the museum — and I’ve spent two hours in just the first two buildings!’”

Not a problem, Tichonuk reassured his guest. A day pass is good for a return visit the following day. ■

On the Waterfront

The museum takes part in the Lake Champlain Maritime Festival July 27 to 30 in Burlington's Waterfront Park, showcasing classic longboats, canoes, kayaks and dragon-boat demonstrations that commemorate the past, present and future of Lake Champlain. The fest also features boat-building demos, local food, live music, and hands-on exhibits for kids. LakeFestival.com

TOUS SUR LE PONT

La préservation du savoir-faire nautique traditionnel au moyen d'ateliers, de cours et d'excursions sur l'eau est au cœur de la mission du musée. Cinq cent deux fois par mois, le musée offre une cinquantaine de personnes à monter à bord de l'Acage. Les passagers peuvent admirer les écluses sans équipement de plongée : ce lieu présente des images filmées en direct par un véhicule sous-marin télécommandé. « On voit tout très bien sur grand écran : un coquillage à la main », indique Joyce Carrière, cadretrice du musée.

Pendant l'été, plusieurs cours sont offerts aux visiteurs, notamment des démonstrations quotidiennes de soufflage du verre, suivies d'autres pour fabriquer des fous de navigation, des lentilles de phares à spirales des verres de pont et des pinces.

Le musée offre également l'un des plus grands ateliers de forgeron de Nouvelle-Écosse. Il y a environ 10 ans, pendant la construction de la rolique de la Chloquie construite Philadelphie, le musée a reproduit une forge du 19e siècle. L'exposition a connu une telle popularité qu'en 2008, une nouvelle forge a ouvert ses portes, destinée à l'enseignement de la forge, du travail des métaux et du montage en bronze.

Le musée met aussi à la disposition des visiteurs sa flotte de 78 écluses à rames pour des excursions hebdomadaires d'une heure sur la lac. Lorsque le temps le permet, les visiteurs peuvent aussi faire la formation nécessaire et effectuer les opérations de sécurité.

Un programme chargé : vous êtes? Brock Tichonuk, cadretrice du musée, a demandé à un visiteur son avis sur les lieux. Elle dit : « Il m'a dit qu'il était très intéressant, se souvenant-il de lui à des moments précis et il m'a répondu qu'il avait lu quelque part de profiter deux heures pour la visite du musée - or il avait passé deux heures juste dans les deux premiers édifices ».

Enfin, il rappelle au client que les billets d'entrée sont valides deux jours de suite. »

Au bord de l'eau

Le musée prend part au Lake Champlain Maritime Festival, du 27 au 30 juillet. Le parc Waterfront de Burlington accueille chloques traditionnelles, canots, kayaks et démonstrations de bateaux-dragage pour célébrer le passé, le présent et le futur du lac Champlain. Le festival propose également des démonstrations de construction navale, des mets locaux, des spectacles nautiques et des activités interactives pour les enfants. www.festival.com

ET SUZANNE PODRAIZER

In the mid-19th century, the waters of Lake Champlain lapped much farther east than they do today — right up to the edge of Burlington's Battery Street, which was then called Lake Street.

At the time, Burlington was the country's third-largest lumber port. During that period of high industry, and over the next 100 years, the edge of the lake was filled in and developed. The newly created waterfront was a bustling hub of activity. Workers lived in tenements and house boats, and the area was jam-packed with the businesses and infrastructure necessary to feed hungry laborers.

That makes the waterfront an apropos meeting spot for Burlington Edible History tours. Running three times a week from mid-June to mid-October, these walks are led by guides including tour cofounders Gail Rosenberg and Elise Guyette — both writers and historians who are past presidents of the Chittenden County Historical Society.

That makes the waterfront an apropos meeting spot for Burlington Edible History tours. Running three times a week from mid-June to mid-October, these walks are led by guides including tour cofounders Gail Rosenberg and Elise Guyette — both writers and historians who are past presidents of the Chittenden County Historical Society.

Inside, the freshwater aquarium and science center offers an array of exhibits about the history and ecology of the lake — as well as tanks filled with mostly native fish, reptiles and amphibians.

The tour begins, and for the next three hours and 15 minutes, participants stroll the city learning fascinating tidbits about days gone by. For instance, a tunnel underneath Maple Street used a rolling conveyor belt to move huge blocks of ice from the lake to the nearby warehouse. And, during the Great Depression, grocers would trade food for paper dollars instead of money and then pay off the RDA so that impoverished customers would have to use

A laminated book of historical photographs brings each story alive. Here is a picture of corn and squash grown by the Abenaki tribe; there is a picture of a German Neutopia maker who was raising three fingers. Dartington landmarks did the people.

All though many participants in Burlington's famed Vermont City Marathon complete the 26.2-mile race in less than three hours, those who are on the Burlington Cobble History tour only cover about two miles. That is, in part, because they get to drive and relax.

First, there is a fresh salad in the Midwestern Café at ECHO — harking back to the time when farm-to-table was a way of Devenir au vert, elles attendent les participants à leur prochaine visite dans le ECHO Lusty Center for Lake Champlain. À l'intérieur, cet aquarium d'eau douce et centre des sciences offre diverses expositions sur l'histoire et l'écologie du lac — ainsi que des beaux paysages de poissons, de reptiles et d'amphibiens, surtout d'espèces exotiques.

La route commence et durent les trois premiers heures et quinze minutes, les participants déboulent dans la ville et, entraînés des instituteurs, observent démarrant d'un pont levable. Ils observent, s'arrêtent, puis se relâchent à l'époque d'un carrousel à roulettes, dans un tunnel sous Maple Street, pour transporter d'énormes blocs de glace destinés à la ville jusqu'au dépôt de glace non loin? Les minutes, qui durent à Grande Case les deux heures de l'après-midi de la journée et confère des billets de reconnaissance de clients au lieu d'argent, puis débouchent dans la ville devant les clients dans la zone pour célébrer avec eux la soirée.

Un livre pliant rempli de photos historiques donne vie à chacune de ces histoires : les deux oursons et du miel cueillis par le frère des Abolens, la un fabricant de saucisses d'origine allemande ayant trois doigts en moins. Au fil des pages, les histoires de Huntington sont bien en valeur.

life. Next is a sweet treat at Magicians — an art gallery and coffee shop not far from the city's skyline. Then comes a slice of French Canadian meat pie at Penny Clay Café, which has long reigned as the city's hottest brunch spot, and a nibble at the elegant Hotel Vermont's Jasper restaurant. At each of the stops — which together make up a meal — bite-size stories link the food to local history.

Part of the fun, say Baumberg and Guayella, is that the tour is different every day, depending on each guide's passions and the group's interests. On rainy days, more time is spent inside, gathered around tables. Sometimes and blue skies, on the other hand, keep the tour mostly outdoors.

Burlington Cattle History walks are well suited for out-of-towners looking for a fun and engaging way to learn more about the place they're visiting. But even those who live or work in Burlington can pick up something new. That building you walk by on your way to work? It might have been the city's first Chinese restaurant. Your friend's backyard? It might have been a Lebanese family's subsistence garden.

And the tours serve as a good reminder that when we head to a swinging bench by the lake path, visit the boat house for a sunset cocktail or stop at BCARD to check out the tarfish and turtles in its tanks, the ground we're walking on used to be water. B effectuant la visite Burlington Edible History n'en avaient que trois, environ. Mais il faut dire qu'ils avaient souvent pour manger.

Pour commencer, salade fraîche au Westernside Café du centre CD40 — c'est là où la Pipouque ou l'alimentation « de la ferme à la table » était un mode de vie. Concerte Invention à Higginson — galerie d'art et café à deux pas de la gare de triage de la ville. Parc, pointe de touristes « concubines-françaises » au Penikese Café, qui a longtemps été le lieu le plus chaud en ville pour le brunch et amuse-bouche au Old restaurant, d'après de l'Hôtel Vermont. A chacun des arrêts — qui forment ensemble un repas complet — des petits cadeaux de brochures font le bon menu gastronomique et historique locale.

Selon Miles Rosenberg et Guyette, ce qui ajoute au plaisir, c'est que le menu change tous les jours, au gré des pouvoirs de chaque guide et des intérêts du groupe. Lorsqu'il pleut, on passe plus de temps à l'intérieur, autour d'une table. Par contre, quand le soleil est de la partie, la route se déroule surtout dehors.

Les promeneurs Burlington Edible History sont idéaux pour les gens qui ne sont pas du coin et qui cherchent une façon amusante et éducative d'en apprendre davantage sur les lieux qu'ils visitent. Cela dit, même ceux qui vivent et travaillent à Burlington peuvent apprendre une chose ou deux. Qui innuendait que vous voyiez tous les matins en allant au travail? C'est peut-être le premier restaurant chinois de la ville. La cour arrière chez votre ami? Peut-être le premier jardin de substance d'une famille libanaise.

En outre, ces visites nous rappellent que lorsqu'on s'assoit dans une table ou près de la paille cyclable, qu'on est le long d'un bateau pour un cocktail ou cauchemar de soleil ou qu'on gambade au centre CD40 pour admirer les falaises de mer et les tartans dans leurs basins, on se trouve là ou ailleurs, il n'y avait que de l'eau? M.

Les visites Burlington Edible History ont lieu tous les jeudis, samedis, du 11h à 4h15, du 15 juin au 14 octobre, s'arrêtant dans cinq restaurants le long du trajet, coût de $25/$30, y compris au moins une portion d'histoire. Des pour-petit-déjeuner sont vendus à New Farms for New Americans, un organisme sans but lucratif qui offre des ressources aux réfugiés pour les aider à cultiver des aliments pour leur famille. burlingtonediblehistory.com

DE 12:15 / 12:15 DÉPART

COURTESY OF VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY

Baseball is America's favorite pastime, and it's easy to see why at a Vermont Lake Monsters game. Home games are held at historic Centennial Field — opened in 1906, it's the oldest active ballpark in the country. These days, the small stadium draws nearly 100,000 fans each summer to watch the state's minor-league baseball team go to bat. Throughout the years, plenty of Burlington players have gone on to the majors, including Hall of Famer Ken Griffey Jr. Buy some peanuts and Cracker Jacks, then watch team mascot Champ — a friendly green incarnation of Lake Champlain's storied mascot — entertain the masses.

Vermont Lake Monsters

Le baseball n'est pas une religion aux États-Unis. Il suffit d'aller voir une partie des Vermont Lake Monsters pour comprendre pourquoi. Les matchs disputés à domicile au Centennial Field, un lieu historique — ouvert en 1962 — ont le plus souvent été de baseball encore actif au pays. Chaque été, près de 100 000 amateurs viennent assister aux processus de l'équipe de baseball mineur de 1044. Au fil des ans, de nombreux joueurs de Burlington ont passé dans les équipes majeures, dont Ken Griffey Jr. entré au Hall of Fame. Faites le plein de curiosité et de Clacker Jacks, puis regardez la mascotte verte, Champ — le verton sympathique du célèbre monstre du lac Champlain — devenir la foule.

Season runs mid-June through early September with home games at Centennial Field, University of Vermont, in Burlington.

Ben & Jerry's Concerts on the Green

IN SEASON • EN SAISON

Vermont's version of Tanglewood — western Massachusetts' renowned outdoor concert space — is the Ben & Jerry's Concerts on the Green series at Shelburne Museum. Here, with a view of verdant hills, the distant Adirondacks, and the folk-art museum's historic barns, bridges, and buildings, the music spans more contemporary. Performers lay down blankets this summer for bands such as Cole (May 27), Lake Street Drive (June 16), Rob Dylan and His Band (June 23), My Morning Jacket (July 13), Elton Costello & the Imposters (July 20), Nathaniel Rateliff & the Night Sweets (August 3), and the Avedí Brothers (September 3).

Équivalent vermontais de Tanglewood — un espace réputé de concerts en plein air dans l'ouest du Massachusetts — la série Concerts on the Green, présentée par Ben & Jerry's au Shelburne Museum, est campée dans un décor de collines verdoyantes, au milieu des granges, des ponts et des bâtiments historiques de ce musée d'art populaire, avec comme toile de fond les Adirondacks. Ici, par contre, on donne plus dans le registre contemporain. Cet été, les populeuses installées sur leur couverture jouent soit des groupes comme Cole (27 mai), Lake Street Drive (16 juin), Rob Dylan and His Band (23 juin), My Morning Jacket (13 juillet), Elton Costello & the Imposters (20 juillet), Nathaniel Rateliff & the Night Sweets (3 août) et les Avedí Brothers (3 septembre).

Champlain Valley Fair

IN SEASON • EN SAISON

Summer, like all good things, must come to an end. But it goes out with a bang at the Champlain Valley Fair, held in nearby Essex Junction. The 10-day festival is a mix of cotton-candy fun, dairy exhibits and agricultural investments. From the Fairs wheel to the 4-H show to the food dough, the state's largest fair celebrates fall by the thousands. Don't miss the major concerts on the grounds; this year's performers include Super Ray's Mark McGuire (August 25), Smiley Gilbert (August 26), John Hollenbeck (September 1) and Phish (September 3).

Le festival d'été d'automne le plus important de la région se déroule à la fois Champlain Valley Fair, qui offre une variété de divertissements, d'expositions agricoles et d'investissements agricoles. De la roue à la 4-H, en passant par la pâte à pain, les attractions de la fête d'automne célèbrent l'automne par milliers. Ne manquez pas les grands concerts sur le terrain; cette année, parmi les artistes invités, il y aura Mark McGuire de Super Ray (25 août), Smiley Gilbert (26 août), John Hollenbeck (1er septembre) et Phish (3 septembre).

Barlington City Arts, a center for art exhibits in three areas of the airport, the Skyway, the area above the escalator and the walls facing security for Gates 1 through 5, whether you're arriving early for a flight or are waiting to pick up passengers, do take the time to look around!

In June, the Skyway features Jim Witzphalen's photographic murals about the story of rural America's built landscape. Mariela Milani's bold abstract paintings, allowing for personal interpretation and layered meanings, are on view in the Gates. And Charlie Bluff's contemporary color field paintings, evoking "America's vast and varied environments," appear by the escalator. If you're going up, be sure to turn around and look at the wall behind you. But watch your step!

Starting in July, the "Faces of the Family Room" exhibit appears in the Skyway. In it, Steve Mann's portraits celebrate the diverse families who make up all of the programs at Burlington's 5th Ward Family Room. Greg Danford's landscape photography appears in the Gates, providing a peek into his decades of world travel. ("I have always believed that the best investment you can make in your photography is photo travel," he writes.) Finally Mary Hill's abstract paintings and textile designs — which she calls "an adventure into the unknown" — are mounted by the escalator.

All of these artists live or have spent time in Vermont. Please enjoy examples of their work at the airport and on these exclusive websites.

MEET AN AIRPORT EMPLOYEE
WITH A FAMILIAR KNOWLEDGE OF AN AIRPORT'S INSIDE AND OUT
BY MOLLY WALSH

Slitting in the cobs of a 60-ton "super-bomber" snowplow nicknamed Tango Six, Gerry Carey recalled the day he was hired at Burlington International Airport 40 years ago.

A Montrealer, Carey told him about a job on the airfield grounds crew and arranged for Carey to meet with a manager. "I came in Monday morning," Carey remembered. "He said, 'When can you start?'"

Carey told him well to his construction job and started at BTV that very day.

So began his career as a heavy equipment operator and carpenter at Vermont's largest airport. Over four decades, the Burlington native has seen thousands of planes come and go from the airport's main runway.

He's plowed mountains of snow — more than 100 inches some winters — and, in the summer, moved hundreds of acres of grass. In between those tasks, Carey builds cabinets, counters, signs and more for the terminal, and helps with airport remodeling projects.

The airport has grown over Carey's career, he remembers the time before jetways when arriving passengers always had to disembark down a runway onto the tarmac. And before the parking garage was built, the airport lot would fill up — cars would have to park on the side of the airfield. "We'd run out of space, especially around Thanksgiving," Carey recalled.

His work ethic is legendary. No one on the 12-person grounds crew has more endurance in a snowplow or more determination to tackle almost any job, said Matt Harding, airport facilities foreman. "He always opts for the harder job. He got a chance of painting the walls or breaking concrete, he'll do the concrete — and he's running circles around some of these young guys."

BTV gave Carey an informal exit interview in advance of his upcoming retirement.
